🔊 Overview

There are loud wrestlers — and then there's Reign Rokk.

A touring metal frontman turned ring-splitting bruiser, Rokk traded microphones for fists when the road dried up and the chaos inside him needed a new venue. Covered in tattoos and denim dust, this 300+ pound outlaw is the loudest thing in the room even when he's not speaking.

He hits like he headlines. He moves like he's still on stage. And every match is treated like an encore no one asked for — but everyone remembers.

Style & Strengths

- Big-man brawler with surprising rhythm and agility
 - Uses tempo shifts in matches — slow crush, then sudden bursts of impact
 - Tough-as-nails endurance fighter — absorbs punishment, fires back with worse
 - Loves physical, dirty fights — “Give me a fight I can feel for a week.”

Signature Traits

- Ring entrance feels like a concert: strobe lights, fog, heavy chords
 - Leather-and-denim gear patched with old tour and fed logos — "My body is my tour bus."
 - Spits beer or water mid-match like a pyro cue
 - Finishes matches with a roar and a stomp — crowd often chants “One more song!”

Finishing Move

Main Stage Dive (MSD) – A brutal running lariat from the corner, delivered like a stage dive straight through the opponent

It doesn't look graceful — it looks final.

Notable Matches

- CFW: Reclamation – Triple Threat No Holds Barred appearance; stole the crowd with raw intensity despite the loss
- Former Rustbelt Heavyweight Champion (3x)
- Once wrestled a 42-minute brawl in a Texas junkyard promotion and kept the vest on the whole time

 Quote

“You don’t walk away from me — you crawl off the stage and pray the next act’s softer.”
