🔮 Overview

Dominic Hex is more than a wrestler — he's a haunting.

A man wrapped in myth and malice, Hex emerged from the shadows of Texas's underground lucha death circuits, where fights were unregulated, rings were bloodstained, and winners were sometimes decided by who could still walk away.

He doesn't talk much — not in interviews, not in promos, not even in victory. When he enters the ring, he brings a silence so thick it suffocates the crowd.

He's not here to entertain.

He's here to deliver reckonings.

With deep roots in Mexican occult symbolism and modern American brawler psychology, Hex blends brujería aesthetics, quiet sadism, and surgical violence into a character unlike any other in CFW.

Style & Strengths

- A punishing hybrid of psychological warfare and dark precision
 - Known for slow, methodical pacing followed by sudden bursts of overwhelming violence
 - Strong technical base rooted in catch wrestling, prison-style grappling, and lucha brawling
 - Often targets the neck or back, “to break the root of the body”

Signature Traits

- His full-body tattoos are tied to Latin American spiritual practices; fans speculate many are earned, not chosen
 - Enters to minimal music or distorted ambient noise
 - Never celebrates. Never raises his hand. Often leaves through the crowd or disappears mid-lights out
 - Occasionally draws sigils on the mat with chalk or ash before big matches

Finishing Move

The Execution – A sudden, violent spinning knee strike to the jaw or temple

Most opponents don't kick out. Some don't move at all for several minutes after.

Notable Matches

- CFW: Reclamation – Defeated Reign Rokk and Wyatt Storm in a triple threat No Holds Barred match, barely breaking a sweat. Didn't stay to celebrate.
 - Banned from Iron Ring Pro for “breaking the spirit” of three rising stars in under a month
 - Fought under the name “El Cuervo del Silencio” in his earliest undocumented fights

 Quote (rare interview in 2018):

“Pain is sacred. Most just don't stay in the temple long enough to see it.”
