🔥 Overview

There's something about Wendell Grimes that feels like wrestling's past and future colliding. A kid by age, a veteran by scars. Grimes has been grinding across the independent scene for years — dirty rings, long drives, bad pay, and the kind of fights that teach you more than any trainer ever could.

He was supposed to debut at Reclamation, but when the card shifted, he got left behind. Now, finally in CFW, Wendell's not wasting the second chance. He's a brawler with something to prove and a mat technician who never forgot how to swing his fists. Every match looks like a test of will — not just between him and his opponent, but between him and his own limits.

Grimes doesn't carry himself like a star, but that's what makes him one. There's no polish, no fake bravado — just heart, instinct, and the quiet kind of toughness that can't be taught.

In-Ring Style

A grounded technician who blends gritty chain wrestling with barroom striking. His fights aren't pretty, but they feel real. His brawling edge comes from survival, not style.

Signature Traits

- Indie veteran despite his young age.
 - Combines crisp mat control with dirty, short-range striking.
 - Rough-around-the-edges attitude, but the fans can't help but root for him.
 - Keeps his look simple — taped fists, denim vest, and that "you'll have to kill me to stop me" glare.

Finishing Move

Iron Vein – A brutal underhook driver, landing opponents hard and flat. It's not flashy — it's final.

Notable Moments

- Originally booked for Reclamation before card changes benched him.
 - Finally debuted months later, immediately earning the crowd's respect through pure grit.
 - Ringsider called him "the kid who fights like he's still got rent due."
