Overview

Mirror believes every person eventually reveals who they truly are through the choices they make. She has little interest in promises, reputations, or excuses—only actions. Calm, observant, and relentlessly focused, Mirror studies her opponents before exposing the contradictions between who they claim to be and who they actually are.

She doesn't see herself as a hero or a villain. She's simply asking a question that most people spend their lives avoiding:

"Why aren't you a better person?"

Look

Mirror possesses the lean, athletic build of an endurance athlete. Rather than relying on brute force or explosive theatrics, every movement is efficient, balanced, and deliberate, as though no energy is ever wasted.

She walks with quiet confidence, rarely acknowledging the audience once her opponent is in sight. Her ring gear is minimalist—predominantly black with silver accents that subtly evoke fractured reflections without becoming theatrical.

Her expression is calm, composed, and difficult to read.

The most unsettling part of Mirror isn't her appearance—it's her focus. From the moment she identifies her opponent, they become the only person in the arena. She maintains unwavering eye contact whenever possible, forcing her opponent to feel seen, examined, and quietly judged. She doesn't glare or sneer; she simply watches, patiently waiting for their actions to reveal who they truly are.
